DROPS DEAD IN CANYON

GLENDALE GIRL DIES FROM HEART FAILURE WHILE
SEEKING COUSIN

Friends and acquaintances of Miss Helen Basley, a young girl 18 years old, employed as a clerk in the Glendale Laundry, are mourning her untimely death, which occurred yesterday in Laurel canyon. Miss Basley lived with her aunt, Miss Mary Holm, 1545 Oak street, and while recently having undergone a major operation, still appeared in such fair health that no apprehension of her death was entertained by her relatives.

The young woman left Sunday morning to visit her cousin, Miss Emma Pierce, who lives with a family in that part of the country. It is known that Miss Basley knew of the general direction of the locality in which her cousin lived, but had no accurate knowledge of the house. She took the car to Sunset boulevard and there transferred to the Hollywood car; thence she took the jitney bus to Laurel canyon. Reaching the canyon about 11 o'clock, she set out to find her cousin's residence, but went astray, taking the wrong road. Her cousin, finding that Miss Basley did not arrive at the time she was expected, made inquiries and found that she had reached Laurel canyon.

Fearing something was wrong, Miss Pierce set out to look for her relative and found a couple of motorcyclists who had discovered the body lying on the sidewalk. They told Miss Pierce where she would find her cousin. Going up the road a little way, Miss Pierce found a woman who pointed out to her the body. The deceased girl was lying on the sidewalk. Her body was still warm and the couple who found it first, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Kellner of 1556 Lake Shore avenue, stated that the unfortunate girl had breathed twice after they discovered her body.

The body was conveyed to Strothers' morgue in Hollywood. Thence it will be taken to San Jacinto, where the widowed mother of the deceased girl lives. Miss Basley was a quiet, refined young woman. She was highly thought of at the laundry where she was working in order to get funds to pay her hospital and doctor bills, and also for the purpose of getting enough to pay her way through college.

OLD SETTLERS' PICNIC

The Old Settlers' association held its annual picnic at Echo Park Saturday last, and the usual informal program was carried out as for several years past. The attendance was about as usual, although several other affairs were on the program for the same day which called some away who would otherwise have been present. As it was there were present, in addition to those from Glendale and Tropic, representatives from Los Angeles, Huntington Beach, Balboa and elsewhere, while a number of new members joined the association.

The chairman, Mr. J. C. Sherer, acted as toastmaster, and there were many interesting reminiscences related, and Rev. Henry and Robert Taylor added to the pleasure of the company by contributing old-time songs. The association will meet next year at the same place on the third Saturday in September.

MISS EMILY HARDEN

Miss Emily Harden passed away on Saturday evening at her home on Belmont street. Funeral services are at the Jewel City Undertaking Parlor this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the remains will be taken to her former home at Unionville, Iowa, for burial, leaving Los Angeles this evening. The funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. W. E. Edmonds and the Rev. C. R. Norton.

Miss Harden was born in Indiana in 1848. She remained unmarried in order to care for her parents. She was a prominent teacher in Iowa for a number of years.

CONNECTION OF EVENTS AND PROPHETIC TEACHING

Speaking Sunday evening at the Baptist church to a large and deeply interested audience, the Rev. John Troy gave a graphic lecture on the lights of prophecy showing the connection of world events and prophetic teaching. He said, in part:

"The anointed eye uses the prophetic telescope with which to study the stars of the church of God, Israel, and the Gentile nations. (1 Cor. 10:31.) These three twinkling stars in the midnight sky of the current dispensation connect with mathematical precision world events and prophetic teaching. The three sections of the prophetic telescope may also be marked 'Israel,' 'the church of God' and 'Gentile nations,' respectively, for only by means of this threefold focus of the prophetic lens can be read the three prophetic stars of first magnitude.

"Close observation of the church reveals a six-pointed star, and from each point flashes the light of Scripture making clear the condition of the church of the last days: (1) It will be the church of the itching ear (2 Tim. 4:3, 4); (2) the church of powerless formality, hopeless ignorance and Christless affection (2 Tim. 3:1-7); (3) the lukewarm church, nauseating the Christ that finally rejects it (Rev. 3:12-22); (4) the church of the last faith Luke 18:8; (5) the church of the falling away (1 Tim. 4:1-22); (6) the false church (2 Thes. 2:1-12).

"The visible church of today answers to the six-pointed star of the church of prophecy just before it falls to the earth burned to extinction in its rush through the atmosphere of mammon and worldly glory. The true church, which first began to twinkle on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2), will vanish from sight in the 'Rapture' (1 Thes. 4:13-18).

"Observation of Israel discloses another six-pointed star of remarkable brilliance. Each point scintillates its distinct spark of prophetic truth: (1) Israel is scattered among the nations (Jas. 1:1); (2) Israel will surely be restored Ezek. 39:28); (3) The tabernacle of David will be rebuilt (Acts 15:16); (4) Antichrist will make and violate his covenant with Israel (Dan. 9:27); (5) Israel will pass through a period of unprecedented suffering, known as the day of Jacob's trouble (Jer. 30:5-7); (6) The nation Israel will be born in a day (Isa. 66:8).

"Across the star of Israel we write the word 'Restoration.' He who reads the daily press in the light of Israel may easily connect world events with prophecy. The star of the nations also has six points which flash prophetic utterances in the language of Scripture: (1) A gospel-rejecting world (2 Thes. 1:7, 8); (2) A world in which is heard the false cry of peace (1 Thes. 5:3); (3) A world of hopeless federation (Dan. 2:43); (4) A world given over finally to the worship of a man (Rev. 13:15); (5) A world of tremendous war preparation (Joel 3:9, 10); (6) A world which shall come to an end in God's judgment of the nations (Joel 3:11-13).

"Gloomy prospect! Yes, and worse than human imagination can portray. The nations of the earth are doomed. God's wrath is about to be poured out upon the Gentile world. Microbes that medical science cannot arrest will eat the flesh of rulers and people. Beyond the judgment a bright millennial morn! Christ, the son of David, upon the throne of His glory, ruling in truth and righteousness. O, happy day!

"Then welcome, thrice welcome, ye tokens of God!

What presence but His set this prisoned earth free?

O Star of the Morning, our hope is in Thee?

"Across the star of the Gentile nations we write the word, 'Destroyed.'"

The second lecture, "The Principle of Repetition in Divine Prophecy," will be delivered this evening. Rev. Troy will commence promptly at 8 o'clock. All denominations invited. Come with us and we will do thee good. First Baptist church, corner of Third and Louise streets.

WHITE RIBBON PICNIC

Out at beautiful Elenor ranch, in the heart of Sycamore canyon, where the umbrageous liveoaks and sycamores afford a pleasing shade to the citizen weary of asphalt streets and concrete sidewalks, a scene befitting those pastoral haunts could have been seen on Saturday. Then were gathered together the hosts of temperance to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the founding of their society. This was an all-day meeting and the hours sped quickly past in many pleasant enjoyments.

As befitting a society the very foundation of which is a recognition of the bounties and guidance of God, the noon hour was devoted to prayer, song and meditation. Mrs. H. E. Loveless led the services. The gathering sang enthusiastically several temperance songs. Then each lady present gave a favorite text of Scripture.

Mrs. Loveless was listened to with much attention as she read the Scripture. Her reading was received as a sort of parting blessing containing a message of goodwill and hope and comfort for those who heard her. Mrs. Loveless is leaving Glendale very shortly to make a prolonged stay in Oakland, and as she read the beautiful words of St. Paul in the fifth chapter of Ephesians, "Be ye therefore followers of God as dear children and walk in love," it was felt that it was a farewell wish to all present.

When dinner was served the home principles of the White Ribboners were fully appreciated. The W. C. T. U. stands for the principle of protection for the home. The home was in evidence throughout the dinner, the quality and quantity of which demonstrated that the ladies of the society are excellent housekeepers. Under the spreading liveoak tree the tables were laid and some excellent articles of diet were produced. Fifty-five White Ribboners and their friends enjoyed the delightful feast.

Dinner over, the president called for order and a unique program was begun. First of all, business was disposed of and then, as 1915 is the tenth anniversary of the founding of the W. C. T. U. in Glendale, members were asked to tell their experiences during that time and give a reason for the faith that is in them. To tell why they were white ribboners gave much pleasure to all who took part in the symposium. Many stirring and interesting stories were told and many proofs given of how that faith had grown stronger as the years had rolled past.

It was a cause of much satisfaction to all that the first president of the organization was present. This was Mrs. Hendershott of Crescent City. She spoke of the difficult work the infant organization had had to do. She told of the strong sentiment that used to exist against the cause and of how gradually, under the blessing of God, the opposition had died out and people had come to realize that the work of the white ribboners was a work destined to save society from a great curse. She also expressed her pleasure at being present on this occasion and being witness to the wonderful advance made by the organization.

As several of the charter members of the society were present, it was possible to get from them a synopsis of the history of the society. Each one present contributed some item of the story until the whole history of the organization from the beginning unfolded itself to the attentive minds of the hearers. Among the charter members present were the hostess, Mrs. L. E. Brown; Mrs. Galloway, and Mrs. M. E. Overton. Mrs. Ada S. Burns told the gathering many interesting matters concerning the early history of the society. Mrs. Laura Marsh gave the later history.

Those who attended the gathering from outside centers were Mrs. Francis Walton of Crescent City, Cal. Mrs. Walton was formerly Miss Hendershott, one of Glendale's best-known public school teachers. When in the Broadway school she made a very excellent reputation for herself and had many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon of Los Angeles, Mrs. Julia Beers and Mrs. Pratt of Burbank were also present.

Overhead, as the enthusiastic guests enjoyed the pleasure of the day, floated the glorious Stars and Stripes, emblematic also of the principles of the organization—"protection for the home." Many patriotic glances were cast on the flag and many appropriate allusions were made to the fact that under that flag the United States is now enjoying peace while the whole world is at war. Many were the compliments given Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Brown, host

A committee representing the Glendale-Los Angeles Brand Boulevard Extension association appeared before the city council in Los Angeles Monday forenoon and asked that the council take steps in conjunction with the county to raise sufficient money by bond issue to build a bridge across the Los Angeles river in the course of the extension of Brand boulevard. The city council considered the request favorably and instructed the city attorney to prepare a resolution providing for the question of a $15,000 bond issue to be voted on at the October election. The program provides that the county will add $5000 to the $15,000, making a total of $20,000 for bridge-building purposes.

FAVORS EXTENSION OF BOULEVARD

The Glendale Chamber of Commerce at a meeting held on Sept. 17, 1915, for the purpose of furthering the extension of Brand boulevard to Lake Shore avenue, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, this Chamber has had under consideration the project of extending Brand boulevard across the Los Angeles river at Ivanhoe, and firmly believing that said extension is of great necessity for the convenience and development of the entire San Fernando Valley, and that most of the property owners along the proposed route have signified a willingness to improve said boulevard and have offered all necessary right-of-ways; and,

"Whereas, the city council of the city of Los Angeles have signified their willingness to connect said boulevard by a bridge at Ivanhoe, provided that all the right-of-ways are obtained for said boulevard, and as there only remains a strip of land undedicated for public street purposes, and as the dedication of said strip is necessary in order to secure the extension of said boulevard, and this Chamber having been informed that the strip in question is owned by Col. G. J. Griffith, and as this Chamber is cognizant of previous generous and public-spirited acts of Colonel Griffith, it believes that he will grant the necessary right-of-way and thus enable the consummation of the project; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that this Chamber appoint a committee to wait on Col. G. J. Griffith and endeavor to obtain the said right-of-way from him and present a copy of this resolution to him. JOHN W. USILTON, Pres. G. M. JACKSON, Secy."

KILLING OF THE GAME BIRDS

Fenimore Cooper, the famous American novelist and creator of the "Leather Stocking," relates in one of his novels how the early settlers on some of the lakes in New York state used to capture enormous numbers of lake trout in nets and would frequently destroy 300 or 400 fine fish simply to get a single fish for supper. In this way the lakes were gradually deprived of their finny inhabitants and reduced to a condition of barrenness that prevails to a certain extent all over the land to this day.

Early inhabitants of California, in like manner, tell of the days when migratory waterfowl in inexhaustible numbers used to frequent the waters of the State. During 75 years, however, the growth of population and the increase of hunters along with the greatly improved firearms and the extension of transportation to the most remote parts of the state have resulted in an appalling reduction of these numbers. It is believed that on a conservative estimate there does not exist ten per cent of the number of wildfowl that existed 75 years ago in California. Some species have become extinct and others are nearly so. To save the dwindling remnant of waterfowl the federal government in 1913 enacted the Migratory bird law. Inquiries instituted by the government tend to show that since the enforcement of this law there has been a remarkable increase in waterfowl. This increase includes such important species as mallards, black mallards, widgeon, springtails, blue winged teal, wood ducks, canvas backs, Canada geese and swans.

Many of the reports are to the effect that the number of waterfowl remaining to breed exceeds anything seen during the past 25 years. This is gratifying as wildfowl are a national asset. The state of Maine estimates the annual income from its game resources at $13,000,000 of which 5 percent of $65,000 can safely be allotted to the returns from migratory wildfowl. California has also very large returns from its game resources, though these have also been sadly denuded. In the days of the gold rush to California and for many years after the slaughter of game was indiscriminate and was constant neither to reason nor common sense. The consequence was that California, filled with a ruthless crowd of goldseekers from every part of the world saw its game diminishing rapidly.

Oregon estimates its game returns every year at $5,000,000. Of this amount about $1,000,000 may be attributed to migratory wildfowl. In fact the amount of money annually received from this source from all the states must amount to hundreds of millions of dollars.

One good thing about the migratory bird law, too, is that while it does protect the wildfowl it also protects and increases the insectivorous birds that inhabit every state. Anyone who has watched a single butcher bird, the shrike, at work, knows that he will destroy in a few hours many hundreds of destructive insects and that he is an invaluable friend in a garden. Insects annually destroy farm and garden products to the amount of $652,000,000. When it is considered that the insectivorous birds prey upon and devour myriads of injurious insects the exceeding value of preserving the balance of nature by protecting such birds is manifest.

JAPANESE VIEWS OF BEAUTY

That beauty is skin deep seems to be an idea that is growing up in Japan. That such should be the case is singular, to say the least, as there have been few countries that have manifested a more pure devotion to mere beauty than Japan, especially of late years. After Japan became modernized it became fashionable for officers of the army and navy to look out for very beautiful wives regardless of whether or not they had the other solid qualities that have generally recommended themselves to Japanese husbands.

So much did this become the case that to be the husband of a plain looking wife was almost fatal to the career of a naval officer in Japan. Now, however, the truth of the old proverb is being made plain to the kingdom of the rising sun. Admiral Yashire, Japanese minister of the navy, discussing this matter recently said: "I foresee the doom of the beautiful woman in Japan. Mere surface beauty does not wear well in domesticity. Japan is now launched on a new current of thought. The change that has taken place in the thought of the Japanese on this point is marvelous. Twenty years ago the young naval officers demanded beauty in their wives and naturally got it. Before long, however, they found that they were missing something else. The nation is now demanding extreme liberty, as is shown in the cry for emancipation in fiction and poetry. That liberty has been in vogue in the navy for some years past with disastrous results, not to the navy, which is just as efficient as ever, but to the individual officers who have found their domestic peace a mere myth, having sought beauty in their wives and left out of account the more valuable qualities."

What the admiral means by all this is that the new thought in Japan has given birth to a great many selfish people who are determined to satisfy their own desires, absolutely without regard or consideration for others and that the beauty marriages of the navy are a part of that movement. It is certain, however, from what is being said on all sides in Japan at present that the Japanese will not suffer the continuance of such principles.

Naval officers, according to another authority, are beginning to return to the old principles of loyalty and patriotism. For more than ten years past there has been a gradual return to the old ideas of what a wife should be. The set that used to think they were a sort of diplomatic officers and that therefore they must have wives, fit for the drawing room and for no other part of the establishment, is in the background and the sober, commonsense principles that governed their forefathers are coming back.

The officers that looked for pretty, modernized women are no longer to be seen. The time when an officer's wife is dressed like an overdressed actress is also gone. On all sides in the naval home one sees, quiet modest women, not beauties, it is true, but women of that profound motherly feeling and wisely sentiment that made the nation what it has become. "No longer are the officers of the Japanese navy," says Admiral Yashire, who is authority on all naval al matters, "pretty but extravagant, vain and uncontrollable." The men who follow in Admiral Togo's steps are married to women sober in mind and healthy in body. Thus while the golden age of pretty women is past the golden age of domesticity has dawned again for Japan.

MARKETING PEACHES

SUPPLY AND DISTRIBUTION
IN 1914

The peach crop of the country will amount this year, it is estimated, to 58,000,000 bushels. With the application of more scientific methods, the crop has increased greatly in recent years, and the peach grower is now confronted with problems of marketing rather than of production. Owing to their perishable nature, peaches are unusually difficult to dispose of without loss, and good distribution is essential to prevent the glutting of some markets while scarcity and high prices prevail elsewhere.

In order to facilitate proper distribution the department has just published the results of a study of the movement of the peach crop in 1914. Georgia, it is found, ships practically double the amount of any other state, 4803 carloads coming from there in 1914. California, Washington, Ohio, Michigan and Colorado follow with shipments of between two and three thousand cars. The other states bring the total to 30,000 carloads.

In handling this vast crop there is no uniformity in packing or grading. A change in this respect would, it is said, result in a higher level of prices, for high-grade fruit can almost always be disposed of. Another recommendation is that dealers in the smaller towns co-operate in buying peaches by the carload and in pushing their sale.

The publication already mentioned, Bulletin No. 298, contains, in addition to statistics on the movement of the crop, a map showing the peach areas and a graphic calendar showing the duration of the shipping season in each state.

FAVOR BOULEVARD EXTENSION

A mass meeting was held in the Chamber of Commerce room, Glendale, Saturday evening, called by A. M. Brooks, president of the Glendale-Los Angeles Boulevard association, who presided. Committees were appointed to meet with the Los Angeles city council, Monday forenoon.

BIG AUTO PARADE

Hundreds of auto enthusiasts took part Saturday, Sept. 18, in a decorated automobile parade from the city to the Sheepshead Bay speedway to witness the formal start of practice at the track for the Vincent Astor cup race to be held Oct. 2. The length of the procession startled New Yorkers, although there was nothing like the 17,000 machines indicated by the number of application blanks filled out in advance. The parade started at Columbus Circle, moped down Broadway to Forty-seventh street, crossed to Fifth avenue, down that thoroughfare to Fourth, and moved by way of the Williamsburg bridge over to Brooklyn and thence to the speedway.

Chief host was Harry S. Harkness, who succeeded Carl G. Fisher as president of the Speedway association. Harkness, multi-millionaire, has returned to auto racing after some years' devotion to aeroplaning. In the earlier days of racing he hung up some records of his own, including that on the road from Boston to New York and for the climb to the clouds on Mount Washington. He is to have a car in the cup race, but is not expected to drive it.

SOMETHING ABOUT CIRCULATION

It is an easy matter for a newspaper publisher to talk big circulation figures, and then it is another thing for him to prove that these figures are true. The Evening News and the Tri-City Progress (weekly) have made marked additions to their lists in the last two months. Especially is this true in instance of the weekly in the Burbank, La Canada and La Crescenta localities. Our list of paid subscribers in these localities is open for your inspection. No bragging but actual facts will decide the whole matter.

WANT BETTER PRICES

The National Farmers' Union intends "to fix a reasonable price for cotton." President C. S. Barrett of the union declares that not a farmer in the entire South ever succeeded in borrowing a dollar of the $500,000,000 which Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo announced a year ago was ready to loan to the cotton producers. Unless the farmers succeed in obtaining the money this year, he contends, the business world will suffer. Twelve and a half cents a pound is the price that probably will be fixed.

French and German war offices each claim advances in France, latter saying German army has been forced back seven miles.

Servia, emitting evacuation of Semlin, says strategic reasons prompted.

BURBANK

A birthday of special interest was celebrated Saturday afternoon, the 18th, in honor of Mrs. Clara Dufur, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cora E. Clark of Burbank.

The affair, being an informal one, was greatly enjoyed by 39 friends and neighbors who congregated to pay their respects and extend congratulations to Mrs. Dufur on having attained the age of 70 years, and was still hale and hearty, loved and respected by all who have associated with her these many years.

There was no set program, but several added to the pleasure of the party by responding to the invitation of the hostess with music, short talks, readings, etc.

A piano solo was responded to by Miss Goldie Swaim, which elicited an encore. The Rev. Fred Miller, in beautiful words, addressed the honoree on the beauty of old age and compared the respect shown to the aged in Oriental countries with that exhibited in our own land, and very much to our discredit; for, with the Orientals old age is accepted as the age of wisdom and experience, while in this generation of Americans old age is looked upon as—he did not say subjects of "Oserism," but he would have been excused had he done so, for the present trend with the youth of today is to overshadow those of mature age.

The daughter of the house then gave a piano solo, and several ladies sang "I Love You, California," with Miss Swaim as accompanist, which was followed by a reading by Mrs. Myra C. K. Shuey of Tropico, who responded to an encore.

Mrs. Clark's home was made resplendent with beautiful flower decorations and potted plants, and on the table in the front parlor were displayed the gifts from loving friends.

At the hour of 4 the hostess said: "If all will follow me I will perform my part of the entertainment," which was done, and the guests were escorted to a sylvan retreat among the trees, where a large room was formed by curtains, carpets and rugs spread upon the ground and seats placed around the sides, where everyone was made comfortable.

It was a delightful retreat, with baskets of flowers hanging from the trees and vases of flowers adorning the table at one side, from which was dispensed the ice-cold water, while from some unknown quarter came the hostess and young maidens bearing delectable viands of ice cream and various kinds of delicious cakes made by the hostess, whose fame along this line is far-reaching.

After the lavish feast the hostess required each one present to recite something he or she had recited in youthful school days, and the majority responded with alacrity and created no end of merriment with versions of "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," "Mary Had a Little Lamb," etc., while some sang, and the oldest lady present, 85 years, gave a beautiful lengthy recitation, and another gave a homily on "Tobacco Users," the whole tending to round out a most pleasurable day.

Adieus and kind wishes were then expressed, after which all found seats in an auto truck and were taken to their homes in a happy state of mind, feeling that old age, as expressed in the day's pleasures, was to be rejoiced in rather than regretted, and that to Mrs. Clark was due many thanks for her hospitality and graciousness.

SETTLING A DELICATE QUESTION

"I rise to a point of order!" yelled a stout man, jumping up in the convention. "I want to know if people can come into this here hall an' strew tacks all over the seats. I jest sat on one, and danged if it didn't almost perforate my lungs, and—"

"The point is well taken," decided the presiding officer.

IN THE SLEEPER

When sleeping cars first came in, the bedclothes in the berths were very scanty. On one of those early cars one night, after everybody had turned in and the lights were low, a loud voice called from one of the upper berths:

"Porter, got a corkscrew?"

The porter came hurrying down the aisle.

"Boss," he said in a scandalized tone, "we don't allow no drinking in the berths. Against the rules!"

"Oh, it ain't that, porter," the voice answered. "I jist want to dig out a pillow that's sort of worked its way into my car."

A POOR MAN'S QUESTIONS

Mary Pickford, the movie star, gets a salary of $50,000 a year. We all love Mary, but why not give her a less ridiculous salary and let people see the movies for the original jitney?

Marty O'Toole, as fine a ball player as ye ever laid yer eyes on, was sold from one team to another for something like $27,000. He and all the baseball stars get big salaries. Why not pay them a good salary and let the people get a good seat to see the great national game for 25 cents instead of the usual two bucks?

Caruso, with a voice that gladdens the heart of mankind, gets more for singing one "tune" than the average workingman saves in a lifetime. Why not give him a good salary and let us ordinary dubs hear him sing for four bits?

Why hasn't some rich man who loves the poorer people started a move to boycott the product of every fool baseball and theatrical manager who pays crazy salaries to stars and then levies the tax at the box office?

TELLS OF DULL TIMES

Everyone knows that the times are dull and that the situation in business everywhere is one of extreme difficulty; but everyone is also seeking to believe that there is a way out of the difficulty. Among those who have not lost faith in the coming of better times is W. B. Kirk, who as special agent of the Provident Life Insurance company has ample opportunity to gauge the tendencies of the times.

"Notwithstanding the dullness of the times," said Mr. Kirk, "there has been more business done in the way of writing life insurance during the past year than in the previous year. That previous year also was an improvement on the year before it. There is nothing strange in that, because business men appreciate that while other values are falling, insurance values remain stable.

"Of course, if times were better the companies would do a much larger business, but they really have no reason to complain, for their business is one of the few in the country that shows a steady and actual appreciation. Money is scarce up to the present moment. I find in the course of my many associations with business men of all kinds that it is difficult for the business communities to get money from the banks. Even legitimate enterprises are held back on account of this shutting up of capital. These conditions, however, are gradually being relaxed and I look for a slow improvement.

"It is better, of course, for the country that the improvement should be slow. It is more likely to be permanent when it does arrive. Indeed, a great part of the business troubles the country is now facing has come from the inflation of real estate in past times. On every side one can see the wrecks of that past. The values of real estate cannot be inflated without much harm being done. Ultimately property drops to its real level and the drop never fails to injure many who bought when fictitious prices were the fashion.

"Thus we see on every side real estate men who have unfortunately been compelled to get out of that business. It is a case of the survival of the fittest. This weeding-out process has been going on now for some time, and while it has worked many hardships, it will ultimately be for the benefit of the whole country.

"It is better for the country to do business on a sober and steady basis than to have property run away up in price and then watch it fall, bringing down with it those who invested when it was high. I anticipate, however, a better year in my own business than last. As I have said, insurance is one of the few things that have retained their value and business men appreciate that.

"I am going shortly to make a journey through Nebraska and some other central states, and will have opportunity to observe conditions there. I believe that I will find much interesting matter in connection with the business situation in the Middle West and will be pleased to let the readers of The Glendale Evening News know what is going on."

ARE AGAINST CONSCRIPTION

(Special Service to Evening News) LONDON, Sept. 18.—Any attempt by the government to force army conscription as an issue at the present session of parliament would result in serious internal troubles, the executive committee of the Amalgamated Union of Railway Servants today notified the government. This body also endorsed the speech of J. H. Thomas, the laborite member of parliament, who predicted a civil war if the government should force conscription.

VALUE OF PRINCIPLE

REV. W. E. EDMONDS SAYS MAJORITIES ARE NOT ALWAYS IN THE RIGHT

The Rev. Walter E. Edmonds, upon his first appearance in the pulpit since his return from his vacation, was greeted by an unusually large congregation yesterday. He expressed his appreciation for the greeting he received and for the large number gathered to welcome him home. For his text of the morning sermon he had chosen from the Book of Joshua, chapter 15, verse 19, "Thou hast given me a southland; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs and the nether springs."

The speaker called attention to the fact that the children of Israel, although ordered by the Lord to "go up and possess the land," had by reason of their lack of faith in the promises hesitated and sent out spies to bring in reports on the country, and were deterred from possessing it because there were "giants in the land." Caleb and Joshua, however, advised that the people of Israel go forward and depend upon the Lord to keep His promises, but these two men became very unpopular because they dared to go contrary to the prevailing public sentiment.

From this the speaker deduced the idea that there is at the present time too much of a desire to be popular, to be on the side of the greatest number rather than to adhere to a principle. The majority is not always right. There are different kinds of Christians; some emphasize one thing and some another. These Christians should get in from the borderland, get in where the springs are. These springs are, first, the Bible, which may be said to be the nether spring, and above it and connected with it is the upper spring—fellowship with God.

M. T. HERRICK SAYS FAULTY FINANCIAL CONDITIONS SERIOUS BURDEN ON FARMERS

Speaking, he said, from the standpoint of a banker, Myron T. Herrick made the principal speech before the International Irrigation congress at San Francisco. He declared his belief that the principal troubles of irrigation work in the United States are financial.

The present gathering at San Francisco has drawn thousands of delegates, including a dozen governors and representatives of Pan-American countries and Canada. Most of these delegates visited the irrigation projects in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys last week. Today is "Irrigation day" at the exposition.

Herrick said the United States Reclamation service has built 8500 miles of canals, enough to reach from Palm Beach, Fla., to Fairbanks, Alaska, and back again; has built dikes, roads, tunnels, drainage ditches, railroads, electric lines and telephone systems. It sells at cost the excess energy of its hydro-electric plants for heating, lighting and for small domestic and industrial machinery, giving settlers the benefit of modern scientific appliances. There can now be watered 27,115 farms, totaling 1,343,193 acres. The value of crops on irrigated lands in 1913 was $15,732,000 and of livestock and equipment, $16,484,297. One hundred and fifty-three towns have sprung up. All this practically since 1906, when water first was supplied.

But great difficulty has accompanied this progress, due, he said, to faulty finance. The work should have been done through the issuance of debentures, he declared, each project being required to stand good for its own bonds, which should have been redeemed out of a sinking fund created by the installment payments of the land owners.

A PINK-TINTED HINT

Chief Justice Fuller tells a tale of the days when he was a struggling dispenser of the law in Maine and was locally known as "Judge."

"Several hams had been stolen from our smokehouse, and although I missed them at once I said nothing about it to anyone. A few days later a neighbor called informally.

"Say, Judge," said he, "I heard yew had some hams stole t'other night."

"Yes," I replied, very confidentially, "but don't tell anyone. You and I are the only ones who know it."

THE TEASE!

GOETHALS AT MEETING

General George W. Goethals, builder of the Panama canal, and the world's most famous engineering expert, was the principal speaker today at the opening of the International Engineering congress, which will continue for six days, in San Francisco. General Goethals, honorary president of the congress, described in detail the technical and physical difficulties encountered in the design and construction of the canal.

Ten thousand civil, mining, mechanical, electrical, military and naval engineers from every state in the Union and from 40 foreign nations, representing hundreds of engineering societies and associations, are here to attend the congress.

The congress sessions are in eleven groups, or sub-congresses, conducted under the auspices of these five national associations: The American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and the Naval Architects and Marine Engineers.

It is estimated that the reports of the various committees and individuals on all phases of modern engineering of all classes will fill a dozen volumes.

Twenty-two different problems encountered in the building of the isthmian waterway will be discussed by men who were on General Goethals' force. The general sessions will also deal with waterways and irrigation, railways, municipal engineering, materials of engineering construction, mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, electrical engineering, naval and military engineering.

INGENIOUS METHODS BY WHICH SCOTLAND YARD CATCHES GERMAN SECRET AGENTS

LONDON, Sept. 6 (by mail).—The admittedly thorough and efficient German spy system is up against a most thorough and efficient stump in England.

One of the unhealthiest obstacles for agents of the enemy's intelligence department is the anti-spy section of Scotland Yard.

Official reports just issued show that ten alleged spies of various nationalities, all of whom were declared to be working for Germany, were bagged before any one of them had been in England three weeks. Four readily confessed.

This list, however, represents but a fractional part of the most recent fruits of the British dragnet. On two occasions, it is unofficially declared, the authorities in London cleverly maneuvered to round up dozens of spies who had been operating in London in the guise of British army officers. The method was as simple as it was effective. The war office is said to have informed all army officers in the metropolitan area to refrain on a certain day of recent date from traveling on any trains of the great system of underground railways of the metropolis. The order was strictly obeyed. Every officer's uniform that boarded an underground train on that day contained a spy. The spy bag was full that night.

Several days later, the war office is said to have repeated its warning, this time instructing officers to keep off the motor buses that travel by hundreds on London's busiest streets. The result was similar. The spy bag was filled again.

BUT THE WISH DIDN'T TAKE

"Gee whiz!" said the little boy who had to take castor oil. "I do wish that mother was a Christian Scientist!"

Let us not underrate the inestimable value and importance of our free public schools. The nation has no asset that surpasses this in intrinsic worth.

ONE MEAL A YEAR

There are more than 50,000,000 square miles covered by a depth of three miles of sea, but even at this great depth—where the pressure of the water above would instantly crush a man's body to pulp—there is a great world of life.

Many of the fish and other creatures of the deep are blind. They are, however, able to see by means of the lights which they carry themselves. The "lamps" are little organs dotted over the body, and with the light from them, which is made in much the same marvelous way as the glow worm's, they can use their bulging eyes to see what is going on about them.

But even with the ready-made lighting apparatus and telescope eyes it is a difficult business finding a dinner, so the fish have jaws with an enormous gape and stomachs so elastic that they can accommodate a larger fish than those voracious eaters themselves.

When they have made such a capture they retire for something like a year's meditation to digest the meal, two or three of which are sufficient to last an average lifetime.

QUEER MARRIAGE CUSTOMS

With the Chinese the family of the bridegroom make presents to the family of the bride of various articles a few days before the day fixed for the marriage. The presents generally consist of food, a cock and hen, the leg and foot of a pig, the leg of a goat, eight small cakes of bread, eight torches, three pairs of large red candles, a quantity of vermicelli and several bunches of firecrackers.

Every guest at a Norwegian wedding used to bring the bride a present. In many parts a keg of butter was the usual gift, and if the marriage took place in the winter, salted or frozen meat was offered.

Among the early Germans money was given to the bride's relatives on the wedding day, but this usage was not followed if the marriage happened to be an unequal one.

In Siam all the guests must bring presents. Presents are exchanged between the bride and bridegroom on the evening before an Armenian wedding.

Swedish brides used to receive from their friends a pig, sheep or cow, and from the bridegroom a colt, dog, cat or goose.

The custom of sticking coins on the bridegroom's forehead is common to several Eastern races, among others to the Turcomans and Moors of West Barbary.

With modern Arabians the bridegroom makes the bride presents, which are sent a day or two before the nuptials. As soon as the bride reaches the bridegroom's house she makes him presents of household furniture, a spear and a tent.

TO SAVE GOLD IN MINES

The problem of how to conserve the mineral resources of the United States in view of the fact that two billion dollars' worth of minerals of all kinds are being mined yearly with enormous waste, is the chief topic for consideration of distinguished mining engineers and experts from all sections of the country, who are today attending the American Mining congress in San Francisco.

The present efforts of the mining congress are being directed toward inducing congress to make proper appropriation for investigation with a view to conserving the nation's mineral resources. The mission of the congress is to reduce accidents in mining operations, to provide for the widows and orphans of those killed by unavoidable accidents, to conserve the present annual waste of 200,000,000 tons of coal, to stimulate the production of gold, and to maintain a high scale of wages with better working conditions.

LAZY FRUIT TREES

RECORDS SHOW THAT ONE OUT OF EVERY FOUR LEMON TREES IS BANKRUPT

Get rid of the orchard tree that doesn't earn its own keep. The way to do this is to keep a record of the yield of every individual tree, and to rebud from a high-yielding tree the tree which fails to pay its way. Thus, just as the dairyman who keeps a record of the butter-fat production of each of his cows can eliminate the "boarder cow" who produces less than the value of what she eats, so the orchardist can eliminate the fruit tree which fails to pay fair rent for the ground it occupies.

Such was the text of a sermon preached by Verne W. Hoffman, a student in the College of Agriculture, in an article on "Individual Tree Performance Records" in the September number of the University of California Journal of Agriculture, a magazine published monthly by the agricultural students.

Hoffman tells the interesting story of how Mr. A. D. Shamel of the United States Department of Agriculture, a government expert who makes his headquarters at the university's citrus experiment station at Riverside, induced the management of a great citrus orchard near Corona, Cal., to keep records of the individual yield of 65,000 orange and lemon trees. Use of this system for three or four years has proved how practical and profitable it is on a commercial basis.

Every tree in this orchard has a number painted upon it. Each tree is picked separately, the fruit weighed and the record entered in a permanent record book.

These records soon showed that one out of four of all the lemon trees in the orchard failed to pay its way. Examination was made to see if the low yield was due to bad soil conditions, gophers or gum disease. If no such excuse could be found for the tree, then it was rebudded with a bud from a tree whose record had proved it to yield a high crop and a good type of fruit. The first 2500 trees rebudded all, without exception, came up to the desired standard, and 2000 more have now been flagged for rebudding.

Hoffman reports that Mr. Shamel's experiments show that an unproductive tree can be changed by top-working into a good producer. Three years after being rebudded one lemon tree produced 329 pounds of lemons (during the half year ending June 30, 1915); that is, about seven field boxes, a good average for the ordinary high-producing tree of ten or twelve years.

So the day is coming when the lazy fruit tree will be as promptly detected as the lazy cow who fails to earn her own living. A lazy fruit tree, like a lazy cow, uses as much land and feed and requires as much labor and care as the highly productive tree or the highly productive cow.

MOHR CASE TO JURY

The grand jury meeting today at Providence, R. I., took up the case of the three negroes charged with the murder of Dr. C. Franklin Mohr and the evidence concerning Mrs. Mohr's alleged plot against her husband's life. The case has been placed first on the docket and if indictments are returned immediate trial is expected, special arrangements having been made to prevent the case going over to the December term.

There is much speculation as to whether or not Miss Emily Burger, the doctor's secretary, who was with him in the automobile when he was shot, and who was dangerously injured herself, will be a witness. If trial of the case brings Miss Burger and Mrs. Mohr into court on opposite sides of the case, as may happen, the most dramatic court scenes New England has witnessed in many years are anticipated.

COLD COST CHICAGO MONEY

Chicago's cold summer has cost $500,000 to proprietors of outdoor summer amusement places. Summer garden owners alone, they have figured out, will deposit $250,000 less to their credit this year than they did in 1914. The other quarter of a million has been lost by owners of picnic parks and bathing beaches. Midway Gardens, with heavy brick walls, of great height, suffered less than other summer gardens. But even Midway had to close August 15.

Morris Biefeld, manager of White City, is authority for the claim that the loss will reach half a million dollars because of cold weather and the abnormal number of rainy evenings.

The last of the biggest and most popular summer gardens and amusement parks will close Sunday—nearly a month earlier than in previous years.

THOSE HAUGHTY AFFAIRS

He was a very obliging postoffice clerk. She was very haughty, dressed in silks and weighing little less than a ton. She purchased a postage stamp. He handed it to her. She said:

"Must I put it on myself?" and glared.

"Not necessarily," the young man smiled; "it will accomplish more, ma'am if you put it on the letter."

"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." And also an appreciative receiver.

MEDICAL DISCOVERIES

In Hygienic Laboratory Bulletin No. 101 the United States Public Health service publishes an article entitled "Complement Fixation in Tuberculosis," which neither in title nor in text can be expected to be intelligible to the layman. It is a summary of what has been done up to the present time in developing a test of the blood serum of persons and animals afflicted with tuberculosis, and it is believed that it will be of value to hospital and laboratory workers in tuberculosis who may not have time or opportunity to investigate the status of the subject for themselves.

The methods of applying the tests have varied much with different workers, and the results have consequently not been entirely in harmony, although a strong tendency toward agreement in fundamentals is noted in the more recent articles. The tests are found to be highly specific; that is, not to react with healthy and non-tuberculous persons, and to be comparatively free from the objection to some other tests, that they react with persons who at some time have had tuberculosis but have recovered from it. This article will have fulfilled its purpose if it shall assist in directing some of the bullets of the campaign against disease toward the spot where they will do the most good.

AS KIDS READ

The little boy read as follows: "This is a warm doughnut. Step on it."

"Why, Johnny," said the teacher, "that can't be right. Let me see your book."

WANT LABOR MONUMENT

Labor chiefs in Pennsylvania were planning today to launch their campaign for contributions to a million-dollar fund to build a great monument to labor—the first in the world—in Pittsburgh. The plan, launched by Mrs. Enoch Rauch at a Labor day gathering in Pittsburgh, is to be put before Andrew Carnegie, Charles M. Schwab, Henry Phipps and others who have made millions from industrial plants in Pittsburgh territory.

THINGS AS THEY OUGHT TO BE

The office boy came rushing in one morning and said: "Say, there's a great ball game on this afternoon! D'ye think I kin go?"

The boss looked at the boy a moment and then said: "Now, Johnny, you sit here and make believe you're me and I'll make believe I'm you, and I'll show you how you should have come in and said that."

Johnny sat down and the boss left the room. A moment after, the door quietly opened, he came in and turning toward the desk, said: "There's a ball game at the park this afternoon, sir. Do you think I could get off for a few hours to see it?"

"Shure!" replied the boy. "And here's a quarter to get in with."

HE HAS!

"Your father has a strongbox at home, hasn't he, Willie?" inquired the teacher.

"You mean," asked William, "the one he keeps the limburger in? Yes."

HENCE THESE CHEERS

"Who are those people who are cheering?" asked the recruit as the soldiers marched to the train.

"Those," replied the veteran, "are the people who are not going."
